

Dissidents Ill-Treated—MD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Canadian psychiatrist studying the treatment of political prisoners in the Soviet Union said Saturday that the Russian practice of confining them in mental hospitals and treating them as if they were mentally ill is increasing.

Some, he said, get "chemical lobotomies" to control their behavior.

Dr. Norman Hirt, an associate professor of psychiatry at the University of British Columbia said in a telephone interview conditions have gotten worse since he testified in 1972 that 7,000 to 8,000 Soviet dissidents were being so confined.

Hirt gave his 1972 testimony before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, which released it Saturday.

He said then that Soviet police doctors were using a variety of drugs to achieve behavioral control of individuals with awkward political views.

Among those drugs, he said was Reserpine, once used extensively in the U.S. to control blood pressure, but now phased out in favor of newer drugs with less drastic side effects.

That information, Dr. Hirt said, was gained from interviews with five former Soviet Soviet Security Police (KGB) had discovered that massive doses of Reserpine caused atrophy of the brain, he testified.

In Saturday's interview, Dr. Hirt said he gave the same information which the Senate subcommittee kept under wraps for three years to the Canadian Broadcasting Company, which made it public, and to the Canadian Psychiatric Association, which passed a resolution against the Soviet practice.

Doctors employed by the patients and two former Soviet psychiatrists, one of whom had worked for the police and now lives in Israel.

Since he testified, he said, he has spoken to three more former patients and one more psychiatrist, who not only confirmed the practices were continuing, but said they were increasing.

In 1972, a number of prominent Soviet dissidents talked publicly about being given drugs that caused them to become drowsy for days, or brought on painful fevers that prevented them from leaving bed.

Dr. Hirt said he did not know what percentage of the political dissidents were being given behavior control drugs.

Hirt said Saturday the Russians are now using Ritalin, a common tranquilizer, which in very large doses "causes destruction of the substrate cells, the supporting cells in the brain tissue, so you get what's equivalent to an early senile dementia."

"If you do a post mortem on such a person all you see is the senility, you can't tell what caused it," he said.

One harried policeman told a homeowner who received a threatening call that police had received around 1,000 reports of bomb threats in the Nairobi area.

The bomb scares, followed a weekend terrorist bombing in which a 20-pound explosive charge blew apart a crowded bus, killing 27 persons and injuring more than 100.

Police have arrested several persons for questioning, but expressed bafflement at the motive for the three-week rash of bombings and scares.

They said they have not been able to identify any group behind them.

Security was tightened on important government buildings and private business offices. Authorities continued spot checks of persons and vehicles around the city.

An anonymous hoaxter called the British High Commission in the 13-story Bruce House and asked a secretary, "Is this the British High Commission? Evacuate your staff."

Diplomats, secretaries and other staff members from the commission, other embassies and UN agencies hurried from the building into the sunlit streets.

TERROR BOMB THREATS MUSHROOM IN NAIROBI

Rocket Fire Kills 19

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Khmer Rouge gunners fired rockets into two crowded sections of Phnom Penh today, killing at least 29 persons and wounding more than 25. It was the heaviest casualty toll in the rebels' two-month shellings campaign.

Military reports said, insurgents fired more than 29 rockets into Phnom Penh and its nearby ~~airfield~~ ^{at mid-day} and again in the late afternoon.

A single rocket struck outside the Monorom Hotel shortly before dusk. Witnesses said 41 persons were killed and more than a dozen wounded. Most of the casualties were hotel employees, pedicab drivers and passers-by.

The hotel, which houses the news teams of the United States television networks, had most of its windows blown in by the blast. American Broadcasting Co. and National Broadcasting Co. reporters had just returned to the hotel after covering another rocket blast which took no casualties. One reporter received a slight arm wound.

Another shell fell in the middle of a street at a fruit market.

In a predawn attack Sunday, 10 persons were reported killed and 23 wounded, mostly in the area of the fruit market.

Kidnapped Candidate Wins Berlin Poll

He would not say where the plane was headed but diplomatic sources said it could be bound for Aden, across the Red Sea.

Meanwhile, Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau began a two-day visit to Bonn today with most government officials preoccupied with the kidnapping.

Security was tight, with armored military vehicles, rifle-equipped soldiers and muzzled police dogs on hand as Trudeau arrived from Munich.

His corner of the airport was monitored by a police television van, public observation decks at the adjacent terminal and had been cleared, and soldiers stood guard on every level.

Meanwhile, West Berlin police broadcast an appeal to the kidnappers to confirm that Lorenz was alive, but there was no response.

He said Kinnaird will be difficult to replace and it is too early to mention the names of prospects for the job.

Lorenz, head of the Christian Democratic party in West Berlin, was seized Thursday by a group calling itself the Movement of the Second of June. But the kidnappers were demoted to make room for University of B.C. law professor James Matkin, the present deputy minister.

At the time of his appointment Kinnaird, asked if he expected any lack of confidence in his posting by management groups in the province, said he did not expect so.

He said that as agent for his union he had daily relations with management on a continuing basis and that the relationship wouldn't be lost.

He took over the post Sept. 1, 1973, at a yearly salary of $33,000.

MUNRO RESTS ON FUTURE

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro sent a restful weekend in the National Defence Medical Centre, recovering from fatigue and pondering his future, a spokesman said Sunday.

"He's been taking it easy... sleeping well and eating well," the spokesman added.

He said Sunday that unless the workers return to their jobs, the municipality could have considerable layoffs.

Civic workers in Vancouver, Burnaby, New Westminster, Richmond, Delta and North Vancouver city have served strike notice that entitles them to walk off the job today. Negotiators for the 5,000 employees say they are hopeful for a resumption of talks.

are so many unused tankers in the world right now that they can be rented for less than cost."

It's all triggered by the rising production surplus, which a few oil observers U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon, among them think is as high as 11 million barrels a day. Accept the lower estimate of 10 or even 9 million barrels and you've still got a worldwide oil surplus of about 20 per cent.

The surplus is growing because of the worldwide business slowdown and because customers can no longer afford to buy large volumes of oil at the record prices that oil-producing countries have been charging.

NO SHAH CRITICS

TEHRAN (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi has formally turned Iran into a one-party state with a decree dissolving the country's four political parties and making all its supporters members of a new party.

A political source said the 55-year-old ruler had decided the new setup would be "more realistic." The reins of power remained firmly in his hands, and a change in the governing of the country appeared in prospect.

The Shah announced in a broadcast Sunday that "at least the next two years" the new National Resistance party will be the only political group allowed to operate. However, he said that members of the new party will be able to form different factions."

The Shah told a news conference Prime Minister Amire Abass Hoveida will be secretary-general of the new party. He said all Iranians "who believe in the royal regime, the Iranian constitution and the Iranian revolution" will automatically become members.

League Urges Offshore Wealth Stress

A special co-ordinating body to safeguard Canada's offshore resource wealth has been proposed by the Navy League of Canada.

National president Jack Koyl of 2073 Pauline Terrace made the proposal in a brief he presented to Defence Minister James Richardson.

Koyl said the depletion of the world's land-based resources "made these offshore resources not only more valuable to Canada but increasingly more attractive to other nations, and multi-national corporations."

Koyl said the co-ordinating body should establish policy to ensure co-ordination of all naval, fishery, ocean research, shipping and overseas commercial expansion operations.

Koyl and Bob Hendy of Toronto, national vice-president, told Richardson such a body would be the counterpart of that used by the Soviet Union in that country's bid for world domination.

"No longer simply a capability to defend one's country from attack, sea power is now recognized as the capability to use the oceans in any way needed to further the national aims of the country — through military, economic or political strength," Koyl said.

"It calls for strong, effective maritime forces; a modern efficient merchant marine not subject to foreign control, a healthy fishing industry, a progressive ocean policy with leadership in ocean technology, the protection of marine environment and careful management of our offshore sea and seabed resources."

Noting Canada was trying to increase its sovereignty of the seas by another 1.4 million square miles of ocean, the Navy League stressed the need to increase maritime forces.

It also called for an adequate surface and subsurface military surveillance in the Arctic, a building program for naval vessels and naval aircraft and increased co-ordination between naval ships and other ships in government departments.

The brief stressed the need for increasing reserve forces as a backup and the importance of sea cadet and Navy League cadet and wrenette training as a means of making youth aware of Canada's marine heritage and responsibilities.

RENT GAIN REJECTED

MONTREAL (CP) — Yves Pratte, Air Canada board chairman, says there is no evidence that Yves Menard, former airline vice-president of marketing, used his position for personal gain.

Mr. Menard resigned last Friday, and a published report Saturday said his resignation followed a newspaper investigation into his land transactions in Barbados.

Mr. Pratte said in a letter to Mr. Menard that "there is no evidence you sought any personal gain in connection with the purchase or ownership of your residence in Barbados."

Nevertheless, he said "your decision to resign is the proper one in the circumstances."

The published report said Mr. Menard signed a purchase agreement for a $43,800 villa on the island in May, 1973, although he never made a mortgage payment.

Eleven months later he signed a $1 million rental contract for package tours on behalf of the airline with the holiday resort where the villa is located.

Federal Rent-Subsidy Plan Scope Extended

OTTAWA (CP) — A rent subsidy program for low-income people will be extended to include non-profit and co-operative projects, Urban Affairs Minister Barney Dawson announced today.

Mr. Dawson said in a news release that the government expects to spend about $3.6 million on the shared-cost programs with the provinces this year.

Detailed arrangements will be worked out in federal-provincial agreements, he said. The federal government would pay up to half the operating losses where rents do not cover costs.

The government already makes similar contributions to the cost of public housing. About 112,000 public housing units were built last year with the federal government contributing $68.5 million.

The minister said the rate of public housing starts has been dropping in recent years, partly because municipalities and residents are reluctant to accept such projects.

Mr. Dawson said that by making it possible for low-income people to live in non-profit and co-operative projects "I believe we will achieve a more desirable social integration."

This new policy, of course, will not eliminate public housing but it will provide an alternative for some families and individuals who may prefer it."

The federal government already helps co-operative groups and non-profit organizations such as churches, service clubs or unions which want to build or buy housing for rental at moderate rates.

The Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) has power to provide 100-per-cent financing at eight-per-cent interest rates and an outright grant of 10 per cent of the capital cost.

In addition, these groups can get up to $10,000 to prepare and submit proposals.

CMHC said in a statement that all these federal contributions will be taken into account in calculating the federal share of the rent subsidy.

Rents would be calculated according to the scale applying to public housing.

Read your Tax Guide. It pays.

Your Income Tax Guide not only helps you understand your tax form better, it helps you to fill it out accurately as well.

And that's important.

Important to you and important to us. Important to us because it allows us to process your return quickly. And important to you because it not only lets you in on every tax advantage you're entitled to, but if you have a refund coming you'll get it sooner.

Here's what happens. Every year during the filing season we get more than eleven million income tax returns. Each one goes into our computer to be checked for accuracy. If the computer discovers even the smallest arithmetic error or discrepancy, your form is automatically rejected to be checked and corrected by hand.

That means getting your tax form processed properly takes extra time, and your refund could be delayed.

Again, here's where your Tax Guide can help. Refer to it while you work on your tax return. (It's a good idea to read it before you fill out your form. That way you familiarize yourself with both the Guide and your return.) Follow it carefully. It's been rewritten to make it easier for you to understand. Make sure your calculations are correct, the right information on the right line, then check and double check using your Tax Guide for reference.

And make sure you take advantage of all the tax provisions, old and new, that can save you money. The Federal Government likes to see you get back every dollar you're entitled to.

We can't guarantee your return will be processed within a certain period of time, but we can guarantee it will be given highest priority if it is done properly and accurately.

If you run into trouble and need more help, Federal District Taxation Office addresses and phone numbers are listed on the back page of your Guide.

Open It Up to View

At the risk of again stirring up the angry vitriol aroused in John Fryer, secretary of the British Columbia Government Employees' Union, and Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall over the publication of wage increases (ranging from 19 to 56 per cent over one year) for different groups in the provincial civil service, it might be useful to obtain a third opinion from a neutral onlooker. (Hall and Fryer, you may recall, used terms like "bloody irresponsible" and annoying to describe the unexpected disclosure of the figures.)

The observer of the labor scene is Wilfred List, respected labor reporter for the Globe and Mail. He spoke last week at the annual conference of the Industrial Relations Management Association in Harrison Hot Springs, B.C.

Here's what he said:

"On the whole the collective bargaining process is swathed in far too much secrecy. Too often, the union members, company shareholders and, in the case of government employees, the public, are kept in the dark about the progress of bargaining or lack of it when, in my opinion, they have a right to know."

If a fair appraisal is not made available to the news media by leaders of union and management bargaining teams, the result can be speculation and spawning of unwarranted fears — not only for those directly involved but also for workers and investors in allied industries."

Sound familiar? If Hall and Fryer, the men at the top in management and union, respectively, in the B.C. civil service bargaining, had set out deliberately to create unwarranted fears and wild speculation about their negotiations, they couldn't have done any better job than resulted from the year-long total ban on information.

What's the reason for the strict secrecy anyway? The BCGEU's explanation, given by Fryer a month ago (after the government itself revealed in cabinet orders-in-council some wage increases as high as 44 per cent) was that it is to avoid "a piggy back effort where one component saw what another had obtained and went for something higher."

Who's that going to fool? These are all members of the same union. Some members of one component work in the same office with other components. They gossip back and forth and the salary negotiations must be a big item at coffee breaks. Are we to assume one component knows absolutely nothing of what another component is demanding? There's a Santa Claus and an Easter Bunny too.

This secrecy rule is stupid and should be stopped. We've seen the result of keeping out the public — which has a right to know as it pays the higher wage bill in the end — until a couple of news leaks spring partial, and perhaps incorrect information. Keep the negotiations top secret and naturally there will be rumors and wild surmise. Opening them up to view can only benefit union, government and public.

Special Agency Needed

Whether Premier Dave Barrett likes it or not, his government apparently is getting itself a department of women's affairs in all but official status. The premier's firm unbending opposition to giving responsibility for women to a separate, distinct ministry has been expressed numerous times. In a nutshell, his argument against such a move is that all people have problems, not just women, despite hard evidence that women are a group discriminated against much like blacks and other minorities.

But it seems some of his cabinet ministers are getting around this fiat by appointing piecemeal different special consultants and establishing special programs. Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk, is only the latest cabinet recruit to the women's rights cause.

He's established a women's economic rights branch in his department to "examine, plan and recommend on all issues affecting the economic rights, economic development and socio-economic status of women in B.C." The branch will publish statistics on women in the province, monitor the progress of a plan to give women in the department equal opportunity with men, and provide advice and support for women in business.

The education department has a special staffer whose job it is to review teaching materials for sexist content. Appointed by Education Minister Eileen Dally, Reva Dexter has also been holding workshops and seminars on the subject of sex bias in the curriculum. (Why aren't there more girls in shop classes, for example?)

And the director of human rights, in Labor Minister Bill King's department, is most appropriately a woman, Kathleen Ruff.

She has been very visible and vocal in tackling sex discrimination in hiring, wages, promotion, job stereotyping, the whole range of problems.

How much more effective might these separate efforts be under the administrative roof of a single department? Premier Barrett should set aside his own personal prejudices and establish a women's department, or better yet, a department devoted to erasing all discrimination. He established a housing department, for example, in response to a pressing need.

Once a substantial measure of equality has been established, the department can always be disbanded. Indeed, its accomplishments in wiping out discrimination will only hasten the day such a special agency will no longer be required.

JAMES RESTON

Black Unemployment Bad

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — In the capital of the United States, the economic slump is statistics and politics, but out here in the country, it's anxiety over jobs, layoffs, deficits, bankruptcies, drop-outs and crime.

The U.S. federal government, which is seldom excessively pessimistic, tells us that we can expect abnormally high unemployment for at least three years, and to take just one of its startling figures, that 41.1 per cent of all black teenagers in the country — 41.1 per cent — are now out of work.

Already, some of the labor union leaders, meeting in Miami Beach, are talking about bringing the unemployed workers "into the streets," which sounds like a formula for making things even worse than they are; but the social and political consequences of a prolonged period of excessive unemployment in the black ghettos could be much more serious than the Ford Administration has ever considered.

Jobs Missing

Total unemployment country-wide was 8.2 per cent in mid-January but it is higher now, worse than the national average in industrial New England and in the south, much worse among the young in general and the black young in particular.

If anybody thinks this country can have over 40 per cent of its black teenagers out of work for three years without serious trouble in the streets, I haven't met him. But while the Ford administration has published the figures, and talked about public service jobs, it has merely trifled with the problem.

The national statistics are deceptive. They give us general averages for the continent, but the unemployment is uneven, and social turmoil often comes out of concentrated urban pockets of despair.

Wherever you go in this country, you see disparities between rich and poor communities in every state, and often within a single town or city. There is a lot of money around in the big cities — fantastic prices are being paid at the top of the economic scale — but serious problems among the average folk at the beginning and at the end of married life.

The situation here in North Carolina illustrates the crankiness of things, the element of accident, or as John F. Kennedy once said, the "unfairness of life." This state is following accurately enough the national economic pattern — over eight per cent unemployed but spotty.

In government towns, like Raleigh, and university towns like Durham and Chapel Hill, it is below the national unemployment, which was booming before the slump, is now falling below the national average in construction, and all the industries that go with it — textiles, furniture, etc. — and this is particularly hard on the one-industry towns in the Carolina piedmont.

All this makes the problem of policy for the president and congress extremely difficult. For an energy policy that fits the problem in one area of the country doesn't fit the problems of totally different areas, and a policy that deals with eight per cent or even 10 per cent unemployment in general, doesn't deal with 41 per cent black teen-age unemployment, mainly in the guts of the big cities.

President Ford has paid his respects to all these problems. He has suggested public service jobs, in a limited way, and tax rebates, and other aids to the poor, but he has not really dealt with his own most disturbing statistic, that 41 per cent of the young blacks are out of work, and soon it will be 50 per cent, and that their hope of getting jobs during the next three years is pretty dim.

Slow to Move

Somehow, in the planning of the next year and in the authorization and appropriation of money, this problem of young black urban unemployment is going to have to get a higher priority than it now has.

The president has all kinds of models before him — the Civilian Conservation Corps of the old New Deal days, the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973, and dozens of other experimental programs, old and new, good and bad. But at some point he has to put money behind a program that will deal with a roving unemployed black teen-age population — almost half of the young blacks in the nation.

The president has recognized it, and fiddled with it, but he has not really grappled with it or funded it. And if his figures are right — and over 40 per cent of the young blacks are going to be out of work for the next three years — this could be more of a violent energy problem than he now has in the Middle East.

BLACKS IN MEMPHIS
... danger of renewed unrest?

employment average, but in the mill towns and furniture towns, it is, as they say here, "burning bad."

The public university here reports few drop-outs so far, white or black, but the pre-registration for the spring semester, particularly from the poorer parts of the state and in the Appalachian branch units, is down, and the pressure from the state legislature to cut the university system budget is severe.

Dree Provides Few Answers

OTTAWA — At regular intervals the department of regional economic expansion directs our attention to another chronicle of happy take-offs. Of the crash landings, not a word is volunteered although we hear of them occasionally through answers extracted from the government by means of written questions.

Earlier this week, a corner of the curtain was lifted when Paul Dick (PC-Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) obtained some information about 26 projects in his area. There was, in addition, a reply to Eudore Allard, a Social Credit member interested in a Rimouski enterprise.

It is apparent from the answers that the record is mixed. The department backed viable undertakings. It also subsidized or offered subsidies to companies which swiftly became casualties. Sometimes the jobs materialized in the numbers promised and sometimes they did not. Despite the brave announcements, enough emerges to suggest that considerable sums are being wasted — quite apart from those which may have been expended unnecessarily to induce business to do what it would have done in any case.

Once a substantial measure of equality has been established, the department can always be disbanded. Indeed, its accomplishments in wiping out discrimination will only hasten the day such a special agency will no longer be required.

Arabia, Where Past Meets Future

By GEORGE BAIN
Toronto Star

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — This is a place where bright young specialists in such exotic sciences as econometrics, speaking idiomatic American English they plucked up abroad with their PhD degrees, talk about creating a new Saudi Arabia; yet on a Friday a criminal may be publicly put to death or mutilated in Execution Square.

In Saudi Arabia, richest of the oil states, head-on collisions abound between a lingering harsh past and a future that is hurtling onward on the strength of some $30 billion a year in oil revenues.

As recently as 1965 this country had one university, in Riyadh, and an argument about whether another was necessary. Now there are five and those are not enough. Education is free at all levels, and generous scholarships are available to qualified students who want to go abroad to take advanced degrees, especially if they are willing to come back to teach.

Yet with this liberal education policy students are still rigorously segregated by sex at the universities — female students are in a distinct minority throughout the education system — and, when women receive lectures from male professors, they are given by closed-circuit television.

This is the eye is a city almost without women. The ministries of government are wholly male preserves. There are no female staff in the hotels or in the shops; the few women seen on the streets go fully veiled. The veil is gradually disappearing in the Arab world, in some places partly due to the influence of large numbers of unveiled foreign women who have entered the society. Not here.

Notwithstanding the large numbers of foreign businessmen who camp out these days amid the faded glories of the Sahari Palace and other hotels — Riyadh is not a notable hotel town — this remains very much a closed-in society.

* * *

Visas are necessary not only to get in but to get out, and the issuing of an entry visa is by no means a routine matter. For one thing, the applicant may be asked to present documentary proof — birth or marriage certificate — ostensibly to show that he is Christian, actually to show that he is not Jewish.

Within the country he may find himself hotly complaining to the news dealer that the foreign newspaper for which he paid $1 is laced with holes, only to have the newsdealer make a sign with two fingers around the eye to symbolize someone looking and a clipping motion with two fingers of the other hand.

"Oh, yes," says a non-Saudi resident businessman. "There is censorship, and not just of the foreign papers; the Arabic as well. You should see some of the magazines we get. You can hardly read the stories."

Is this reason for political or religious reasons? "Both," he says.

Saudis are very ready to talk about their solidarity with "our Arab brothers" and "our brothers in Islam."

The impression is easily formed of a sort of religious zeal bordering on fanaticism which would elevate solidarity with Egypt and Syria, for example, above any consideration of commercial advantage in the event of another Middle East war.

Neither Saudi Arabia's ambitious plans to industrialize so that there will be jobs and income when the vast pools of oil begin to dry up, nor its almost total identification with the West, and especially the afternoon, at sunset and again in mid-evening. A perfunctory observance may take three minutes, a full prayer up to one-half hour.

Here the individual is not left to recognize his duty alone; there are men of a society — some foreigners speak of a religious police — who go about the streets to urge laggards into the mosques.

In Arab dress, which is almost universally worn within the country, the young men who have been sent off to get PhDs in America sound like disguised Americans. At the education ministry there's Ibrahim Abbas Natiq (PhD at the University of Texas), saying as briskly as any Board of Trade man, "Right! Let's fill in some of the numbers," as he prepares to go over an education budget that has risen 2½ times since 1970.

order said to exist here.

Yet it is to the West and the United States that Saudi Arabia looks for the technology which it so anxiously wants, for its modern defence equipment, and for the higher training of its young people.

In Arab dress, which is almost universally worn within the country, the young men who have been sent off to get PhDs in America sound like disguised Americans. At the education ministry there's Ibrahim Abbas Natiq (PhD at the University of Texas), saying as briskly as any Board of Trade man, "Right! Let's fill in some of the numbers," as he prepares to go over an education budget that has risen 2½ times since 1970.

And at the planning organization, Faisal Bashir (BS and MA in economics at the University of Oregon, PhD at the University of Arizona) says:

"People just think we're sitting in Saudi Arabia stacking the money. They don't know what we have to do."

"We have to look at the surplus over our requirements 50 years ahead. Project the future of Saudi Arabia 50 years from now and then calculate the expenditure for that . . . That's what you've got to look at."

The Post Office: What to Do?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The labor scene in the post office is the most interesting of all management-labor contests this year. One reason is the class awareness or class "roots" of the two federal ministers most involved — Bryce Mackay and Jean Chretien.

Both the postmaster-general and the president of treasury board (what noble titles) come out of working-class homes. Throughout their public careers they have cherished, rather than let slip, this background, say like Gerard Pelletier or Romeo Leblanc or Marc Lalonde or Warren Allmand or Robert Andras. Aside from Chretien and Mackay, the only ministers in the cabinet whom one identifies immediately with plain ordinary folk and not with the professionals and the bourgeoisie, are Gene Whelan, John Munro, Jean Marchand and Dan Macdonald (Dan not Don).

I mention this fuzzy but real matter of class empathy because Mr. Mackay spoke strongly about it to the party caucus the other day. He and Mr. Chretien face hard problems if they are to get agreements with first the letter carriers and then the "inside" workers (the Canadian Union of Postal Workers).

The difficulties are enhanced by the current state of the economy, a public anticipation sparked by the media that the government is to take a tough line with its employees, and the several indications, including remarks by the minister of finance, that successful grabs for much more money by unions are now fanning inflation inexorably.

The impossible and the ironic demand is that the post office be made a crown corporation and so at arm's length from the government. "Ironical" because Mackay reminded his colleagues that it was stock Liberal strategy to set their caps and their policies for the votes of "blue-collar" workers at election time, then to push them around or ignore between elections while, as a government, they catered to the well-to-do and the well-educated.

The minister stressed that he needs and expects understanding and patience from all Liberal MPs, not simply in getting agreements with the two main units of postal workers but in the much longer task of turning around the post office and making it synonymous again for quick, efficient, trustworthy service.

Pessimist Easy

It is easy, according to Mr. Mackay, to become pessimistic about the post office. Despite his own goodwill towards the workers and the ready sympathy he has found in Mr. Chretien, it sometimes seems impossible to foresee a fair settlement with the inside workers. Whereas some 35 issues have been cleared up in negotiations with the letter carriers and the seven or eight left, including "money" and a "cola" clause, he has to wonder about both the good faith and the common sense for the union leadership.

If it really represents all workers, why has the unilateral introduction of automation been accepted by workers in eighteen Canadian centres?

Mr. Mackay makes no secret that his general discouragement is over the irascible and irresponsible militants who seem to dominate the post office unionists in Montreal.

The leaders have been insisting that he and Chretien beat all bargaining sessions, it is impossible to meet this demand, particularly because it makes such bad precedent.

There is a sensible, current reason for the demand of crown corporation status. It is to be legally able to bargain over the introduction of automation. Both Mackay and Chretien are ready to negotiate in this contract for adjustments to the consequences of technological change even though present law on the public service does not provide for it.

As Mr. Mackay sees it, automation in the post office is a favorable case. It makes the work more interesting and less boring for many workers. He doesn't think there is great resistance to it among most postal workers, even in Montreal. He is not even sure that it would be better to leave the public service for a crown corporation. Although the minister, he knows it is unwise to be effusive about extending so-called industrial democracy to the workplace or to plan and describe new or extended recreational and comfort facilities for postal workers. Much must be done in both aspects if the post office is to be turned back from inefficient service and unhappy workers.

Plague of Strikes

A succession of ministers, aides, consultants, conciliators and mediators have poked and pushed and rued and explained and reformed away at the post office over the past 12 years. The service has been plagued with legal strikes, wild-cat strikes and recently manifestations of sabotage. The post office can't be put right, according to Mr. Mackay, by he and Mr. Chretien as the government being high-handed or negative with the workers, only if the CUPW leaders climbed from their high horses and brought some sensitivity to his problems and those of Mr. Chretien to the bargaining.

The leaders have been insisting that he and Chretien beat all bargaining sessions, it is impossible to meet this demand, particularly because it makes such bad precedent.

There is a sensible, current reason for the demand of crown corporation status. It is to be legally able to bargain over the introduction of automation. Both Mackay and

JARGON AND THE NEW MANDARINS

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

You and I, we fellow taxpayers, we sojourners on that long and rutted road of citizenship, bought an advertisement last week, calling for a new mandarin to come and save us from troubles we did not know we had.

The advertisement is an intriguing piece of prose, issued by the Public Service Commission on behalf of the economics analysis division of the department of economic development.

Applicants for two civil service jobs are sought but first the department of economic development has taken space in this advertisement to suggest why they are needed.

"The economic analysis division will build a pool of expertise in sectoral, regional and trade matters relating to the provincial economy by using advanced analytical methods, including econometric models."

With the exception of "economics," all of these are words of the English language that may be found in dictionaries. That's some help. However, the tone is jargon although the words be English.

The word "sectoral" may mean a pie-shaped piece of a disc-shaped diagram in which such industries as forestry, transportation or the baking of pies are represented by lines.

"Sectoral" may, on the other hand, be an arcane word that you and I do not understand and have never heard explained.

Using the few talents I have as an ordinary taxpayer, I translate this paragraph to say:

"We want to hire people to study the economy of this province."

This would cost less. Advertising space costs money.

Next we learn about Competition 75-744 for a DIRECTOR OF REGIONAL ANALYSIS, salary — $21,515-$24,900.

What kind of man do you and I want to hire for this job?

He must be able to "direct a professional staff of regional economic analysis specializing in geography, land use, natural resources, economic development, transportation, energy supply, political structures, social infrastructure and cultural background."

With the water squeezed out, this reads to me as a description of a successful small town businessman, a small rancher, a peanut stand operator, a president of Macmillan Bloedel or a motel operator.

I never met one of the successful variety who did not understand the country in which he operated or the political forces that moved there.

However, no mere success is sufficient to qualify a man for DIRECTOR, REGIONAL ANALYSIS, unless he be lucky.

The mandarin who is to get this $2,000-a-month job should have a master's degree in economics from a recognized university.

He might get the job if he has another "discipline," such as qualifications and experience, but these come second on the civil servants' list of desirable abilities.

"The successful applicant requires a recognized master's degree in economics or other discipline appropriate to regional socio-economic analysis or the equivalent in qualifications and experience."

The advertisement says the applicant should have a proven managerial ability in directing professional staff.

It does not suggest he should ever have had to meet a payroll.

Two new mandarins are about to be set in authority over us, at our request.

Let us hope, they are good men who do well.

isn't ready for a president named Udal!

That's not Udal," whispered the hostess. "That's Theodore H. White, author of 'The Making of Every President' Since 1960."

"Look," I told my caller, "I've had a hard day and can't bear to cap it off by telling Udal face-to-face he can't make it because the country isn't ready for a president named Udal."

"You're shirking your duty," said the caller. He was right. In the old days people running for president had to get the okay from Mayor Daley, political bosses of Buffalo and Youngstown, governors of Texas and Missouri, the leader of the Carpenters' Union and presidents of five corporations.

That's all over now. Nowadays they have to carry the opinion molder if they hope to get off the ground. With my long experience of political punditry, I owed it to Udal at least to look him over. Mayor Daley would have done that much.

Udal was in a room full of salami, crackers and powerful opinion molders. "Point me to Udal so I can tell him he won't do, as I want to get home in time to finish the crossword puzzle before dinner," I told the hostess.

She pointed. I moved in. "It's no good, Udal," I explained. "America

"With a white wig, false teeth and silk knickers," said Udal. "You'd look just like Anwar el-Sadat going to a costume ball as George Washington."

"Humor!" I cried. "Terrible! Abraham Lincoln had a great sense of humor. You'll need a big mole, of course, on one cheek, but they're doing miracles in plastic surgery these days. Where do you stand on slavery, Udal?"

"Just call me Moe," he said.

Moe! It was perfect. The country had always loved Abe. It didn't take much political savvy to sense that it would stampede to Moe to match its Abe. "Honest Moe Udal." It would look stunning in print. It didn't matter where he stood on slavery.

"Moe," I told him, "you could take it all."

"On the subject of slavery," Udal began, "I believe . . ."

"Keep your lip buttoned," I advised him. "If you start taking positions on issues like that you'll throw away the whole southern vote. Image, Moe!"

* * *

Michael Arlen of the New Yorker introduced himself to me, explained that he had to run to catch a subway and just wanted me to know I wouldn't do because I looked exactly like Anwar el-Sadat. "I'm not Udal," I said. "I am a powerful public-opinion molder."

I was out of patience. Next day I had seven more people running for president to meet, and the crossword puzzle wasn't even done yet. "Will the real Morris Udal please stand up?" I shouted.

A tall, craggy man with tousled hair rose from a plate of salami. Tall, craggy, jowled and Lincoln-esque were the first clichés that ran through my mind. It was a great moment in political punditry. But I didn't want to go off the deep end.

Looking way up at him, I said, "Udal, has anybody every told you you look like Abraham Lincoln? With a shawl, a beard and a stovepipe hat, you look more like Lincoln than Lincoln did."

Report Set on 'Sunker' Logs

The B.C. Forest Service has ordered a report on logs laying on the bottom in a bay and two inlets on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The "sunkers" represent a loss of revenue to the province and are damaging valuable sea resources.

Chief forester Ted Young said the report could lead to a wider study on the subject.

The report is the result of a complaint by Douglas Arnett of Tofino, a director of Save the Salmon Committee, about thousands of sunken logs in Heceta Bay, Tranquille Inlet and Stewards Inlet, near Tofino.

The logs were left there by logging companies and some are piled more than 23 feet high.

Fishermen say the problem is not confined to the areas mentioned but is prevalent along the entire coast of the Island, the mainland and in hundreds of lakes.

Some of the timber in sea water is marketable, and all of it in fresh water.

Arnett said the practice of allowing log booms in areas rich in sea life is wasteful.

Fishermen say the problem is not confined to the areas mentioned but is prevalent along the entire coast of the Island, the mainland and in hundreds of lakes.

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany (FP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau skied down through brooding, Wagnerian forests, then soared to an eagle's-eye view of Adolf Hitler's mountain-top tea-terrace during a weekend in this peaceful Bavarian village.

Elite alpine troops and armed police mounted watchful guard as he tension mounted throughout West Germany over the Peter Lorenz kidnapping.

He was flown from The Hague in a Canadian Forces plane to Munich where a dark green German army helicopter carried him for the last 140 miles to his stay in the Geiger Hotel, which was commandeered during the war for the personal use of Hermann Goering.

During his first day of skiing, the German pilot took him up over the 6,000-foot Kehlstein peak and hovered there while the prime minister and top aide Ivan Head gazed down on the legendary Eagle's Nest where Hitler made home movies of himself with Eva Braun.

Landing later on a grassy knoll behind the 15th-century building at the heart of the Geiger Hotel, he expressed displeasure that journalists were there, saying: "You just couldn't stay away, could you."

He pointed his ski poles at the Canadian television camera crew, then at a Canadian photographer and made a mock-serious run at the photographer, swerving past him by inches just before they could collide.

Asked about the view of the Eagle's Nest, he replied: "I saw some wild sheep."

Then he said: "I realize you

CUBA TRADE?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy (Dem.—Mass.), says he will introduce a bill this week to repeal the U.S. trade embargo imposed on the Castro government in 1961. If adopted, the move would end America's 14-year isolation of Cuba.

Kennedy made the announcement Sunday one day after Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told a civic club luncheon in Houston the Ford administration was ready to develop "new principles and practices" with regard to Cuba.

SHELTON, Conn. (AP) — While police looked for a motive and suspects in a series of explosions and a fire that destroyed a large rubber manufacturing plant Saturday night. No serious injuries were reported. The plant was closed for the weekend.

The state labor department was setting up an office here to expedite unemployment compensation claims of employees of the Sponge Rubber Products Co.

SLA

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Two suspected Symbionese Liberation Army murderers stabbed a prison guard with a pencil and grabbed a key to a cabinet containing four loaded pistols.

They were overpowered as one of them was putting the key in the lock.

"I don't think they had a chance of getting away, but it could have been much more disastrous if they had reached the guns," Sheriff Thomas Houchins said Sunday.

A guard was stabbed in the throat and eye with a pencil as Joseph Remiro, 28, and Russell Little, 25, made a bloody bid for freedom Saturday, the Alameda County sheriff said at a news conference.

The two murder suspects, the only admitted members of the terrorist SLA ever taken into custody, also injured a second guard before they were subdued.

"We're going to take additional security precautions to ensure this type of thing doesn't happen again," the sheriff said.

Little and Remiro are charged in the cyanide-bullet slaying Nov. 6, 1973, of Oakland schools superintendent Dr. Marcus Foster for which the SLA claimed responsibility.

They were arrested about one month before other SLA members kidnapped newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst. Six SLA members later died in a fiery shootout with Los Angeles police.

The attempted break-out came during an interview Little had with Attorney John Bain, who asked that co-defendant Remiro be allowed to join the session.

When the door was opened, the two suspects attacked their guards, one wielding a pencil like a knife and the other smashing an officer with a microphone.

One of the prisoners took keys from the deputies and raced to the gun locker, the sheriff said, jamming the key into the lock.

But at that moment, deputies outside the room were able to open the door and rushed in, ending the escape attempt.

The attack on deputy Larry Franks was so savage the pencil broke off in his neck. He underwent surgery and was reported in satisfactory condition. Sgt. Robert Jensen was treated for bruises and released.

Ford, who has said that no one could win the GOP nomination without conservative support, may have gotten the message. It was learned that the president has asked to meet with Sen. James L. Buckley, (Rep.-N.Y.), a major conservative spokesman.

The group, including members of Congress, governors and party officials, ended a two-day weekend political strategy meeting at an inn in nearby St. Michaels, Md., called to discuss ways conservatives can influence administration and party policies.

They agreed to meet regularly, and authorized political consultant F. Clifton White—who helped engineer Barry Goldwater's 1964 GOP presidential nomination—to take an inventory of all conservative groups to determine "where our strengths lie."

Buckley, (Rep.-N.Y.), who organized the conference, said the formation of a conservative third party was discussed but the consensus was that conservatives should continue to work within the Republican party.

"However," Buckley said, "nothing was ruled out. If we

The workers were left jobless after the explosions and fire destroyed the 2½-block plant Saturday night. No serious injuries were reported. The plant was closed for the weekend.

State police estimated damage at between $6 million and $10 million.

Three guards at the plant said they were abducted by a trio of masked men about an hour before the explosions

Asked if the blast could have been linked to any dissatisfaction among former Goodrich employees over severance pay, B. F. Goodrich Co. and because of dissatisfaction among former Goodrich employees over severance pay, a state police spokesman said:

"We're following the investigation wherever it leads. We have no firm hypothesis as to the motive of the explosion."

The firm has been in the news recently because of layoffs since it bought the operation a year ago from the Weather Underground.

On Mechanization Issue

BEIRUT (UPI) — Fishermen fearing for their jobs battled with troops Sunday in the Mediterranean port city of Sidon, and officials said five soldiers were killed and 10 wounded. Travellers from the embattled Lebanese city reported scores of civilians casualties.

The main roads of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, were barricaded. Fishermen and their supporters deployed small cannon at intersections and snipers controlled alleys and squares from rooftops.

The fishermen took up arms Wednesday after the government granted fishing rights along the Mediterranean coast to Proteine, a private Lebanese company which wants to mechanize the fishing industry in Lebanon. The fishermen insist this would bankrupt the small independent operators who use simple nets and dinghies.

The protest quickly led to violent clashes with police. A prominent political leader, former parliamentary deputy Maaroof Saad, was seriously wounded Wednesday and has been a coma since then, officials said.

Gunfire reverberated in Sidon again on Saturday night. Early Sunday two armored vehicles, one personnel carrier, two jeeps and a truck were destroyed by guns held by civilians, the army reported.

The army casualties occurred during an attempt to break through a barricaded area held by heavily-armed civilians and during attacks on army positions in the city, a military communiqué said.

It said groups of local residents assaulted an army barracks while snipers opened rifle fire on an army patrol in a main square. The soldiers returned the fire and destroyed two guns used by the rebels.

We are serving notice to this administration that the conservatives will not be taken for granted. They are not going to be bought easily or cheaply."

Buckley told conservatives at the meeting that next year's GOP convention will be an "open convention," and no one candidate, including Ford, will have "it locked up in advance."

Rep. Philip Crane, (Rep.-Ill.), said "there is the feeling that (Ford) was not selected by his party, that he is filling out former president Nixon's term as a caretaker president."

Tigers Overwhelm Island Opponents

Victoria High Tigers proved unstoppable in the Vancouver Island high school girls' basketball tournament at Claremont High School.

Tigers, unbeaten in league play but upset by Mt. Douglas in the Lower Island tourney, whipped Port Alberni 62-14 in their opening game, trounced Cowichan 79-29 in their semi-final match and then bombed Belmont 72-28 Saturday to take the championship.

Shelley Godfrey, who missed the Island tournament because she was playing volleyball at the Canada Winter Games, scored 26 points for the Tigers in both the final and semi-final games and was selected the tourney's most valuable player.

Two other Tigers, Doreen Fitzpatrick and Patti Pesklevit, were named to the first all-star team, while Shelley's sister Leslie made the second squad.

In the consolation final, Reynolds Roadrunners edged Cowichan 57-51 to earn the B.C. championships, which are slated for March 12-15 at Victoria.

Mt. Doug, the defending Island champion, won its final two games but missed a berth in the B.C. tourney because of a 37-29 opening-round defeat to Reynolds.

Other first all-stars were Rhonda Keller of Reynolds, Buss Beecroft of Cowichan, Sheila Chalmers of Belmont, Clair Turner and Linda Rogers of Reynolds and Louise Harrison of Powell River.

In other playoff action, North Delta beat Port Moody 41-32 Saturday to take the Fraser Valley championship.

North Delta and Port Moody have both won berths in the B.C. championships. Mennonite Education Institute of Clearbrook, third in Saturday's play, meets the third-place Okanagan team March 8 to fight for another berth.

Alfa Romeo. For people who thought they'd never fall in love again.

The first Alfas were created by love. Conceived in the hearts and minds of a small band of enthusiasts in 1909. Today's Alfa Romeo evolved as those dedicated men built and raced their cars for the love of it. Everything they learned in over 60 years of building racing and production cars has gone into them. The Alfa Romeo 2000 series comes in three models. The 2000 Spider convertible for those who want to follow the sun. For the GT enthusiast there's the GTV coupe, one of the world's truly inspired grand touring designs. And for those who need space without sacrificing pace there's the 2000 Berlina, a superb road car with room for the family.

Each Alfa starts with a light, powerful 2-litre double overhead cam engine, that provides exciting performance with remarkably low fuel consumption. This masterpiece is made even better with Alfa Romeo's own Spica fuel injection system which gives a smooth idle and instant throttle response on regular gas. The transmission is something special too. It's a 5-speed unit that'll whisk you smoothly to 60 mph in less than 11 seconds. But when it's time to bring speed to a quick stop the power-assisted, dual circuit disc brakes on all 4 wheels do just that. As reported in E.P.A. Consumer Aid Series, an Alfa brakes from 80 m.p.h. to a full stop in 278 ft. making it number one in the world. And Alfa Romeo's superb road-holding qualities, aided by a limited slip differential, are an indisputable fact.

heart of a great tradition. Alfas are built by people, not machines. And these people make every production step a labour of love. Every part, for example, is examined before an engine is assembled. And there are 32 more quality checks before that engine is fitted to the car. Attention to detail follows this love affair in every way. Alfa Romeo people even spend hours on a pre-delivery inspection before they deliver your new Alfa. After delivery, they'll have the time to talk to you, take an interest in you and make sure your love for your Alfa lasts.

Basketball Suffers a Lost Weekend

Defence Lacking, Scorpions Bow

By JIM CRERAR

Times Staff

Victoria Scorpions forgot there is a defensive side to basketball Sunday and it cost them a trip to the Canadian Senior "A" men's finals in Winnipeg.

Vancouver Capilano, who didn't forget, will go instead after beating Scorpions 87-79 in the fifth and deciding game of the B.C. finals before about 1,400 fans at the McKinnon Building.

The win capped a three-game streak for the Caps, who dropped the first two games of the series to Victoria two weeks ago but tied it by winning twice last weekend in Vancouver.

The score flattered the losers, who trailed 48-29 at halftime and were behind by 23 points midway through the third quarter. Despite a full-court press that enabled Scorpions to outscore Vancouver 46-31 over the last 17 minutes, Scorpions simply couldn't penetrate the Caps' defence in the first half. In contrast, the winners had little trouble breaking through the Scorpions.

It was all over in the first three minutes when Vancouver ran up an 8-2 lead. Caps were ahead 26-14 at the end of the first quarter and clinched it by scoring 10 straight points early in the second quarter. Scorpions gave their foes plenty of time to get set and Caps responded with some excellent outside shooting.

Bob Burrows finally solved the Vancouver defence in the second half, driving in for 21 of his game-high 27 points. Brian Mackenzie and Gord Hoshal added 16 each for the losers.

It might have been a different story if Scorpions had been healthy. Dave Morgan played in spite of blood poisoning he picked up from a floor burn in Vancouver and managed only six points. Had he been in top form Scorpions might have fared better in their outside shooting. Hoshal picked up some of the slack, counting most of his points with long shots. He connected for seven field goals in the second half.

Mackenzie, too, was hindered by a pulled groin muscle and Chris Hall saw limited action because of a shoulder separation.

Caps, defending Canadian champions, have nearly two weeks off before the four-team national finals in Winnipeg March 15 and 16. That's a break because Price sprained his left wrist in the last 30 seconds when he was dumped trying a layup shot.

Ken Atkinson, coach of the North Shore Mountaineers in the Dogwood Senior "A" League, joined Caps' coach Leigh Brown for the playoffs.

"I expected this game to be the toughest of the series," he said, "and it was. But I thought we played flawlessly in all aspects during the first half. We started the second half with the idea of building on our lead and we did at first, but then we tried to protect it and Victoria closed the second half."

Atkinson, a lawyer who left Sunday to clear up a shipping matter in Greece, felt that winning the first two games hurt Scorpions in the end.

"Sometimes it can lead to overconfidence," he explained. "It's happened to teams I've coached and it can happen to anyone."

In any case, it was apparent from the outset Sunday that the momentum had swung in favor of the Caps.

FLORA MARTIN ... still winning

Another Vote For Martin?

It may be too late to influence the B.C. Sports Federation judges, but Flora Martin has won another bonspiel.

The Victoria Curling Club skip is one of three finalists in the running for the federation's recently-introduced "Master Award." The winner is to be announced Tuesday at a banquet in Vancouver.

Skip of the 1974 Canadian senior women's curling championship, rink and winner of the provincial title again this year, Mrs. Martin skipped her rink to top honors in the annual Victoria Ladies' Daffodil Bonspiel.

Supported by Elsie Humphries, Doreen Baker and Marie Swanton, Mrs. Martin defeated clubmate Judy Christensen 6-3 in the semifinals and then downed Vancouver's Marianne Fries 6-4 in Sunday's final.

Ollie Reid of Playland, Marg Sturrock of Victoria Club and Playland's Madelyn Toews skipped other event winners.

MUTUEL PAYOFF ON DEAD HORSE

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Pacer Soky's Tiger collapsed and died halfway through the featured race Saturday at Yonkers Raceway but paid off as a winner anyway.

The unusual feat was accomplished because Soky's Tiger, a five-year-old owned by William Sokoloff of Brampton, Ont., was part of an entry with Keystone Ponder, who won the race by two lengths. The entry returned $9.40, $3.80 and $2.10 for a $2 ticket.

Russell Rash, who drove Soky's Tiger, was not seriously injured when the horse veered to the outside and collapsed near the outer fence. Officials said the horse apparently choked to death.

Soky's Tiger won $100,000 last year and, during one stretch, won 12 consecutive races.

Barbara Looks After Tennis 'Introduction'

New pro Barbara Johnston opens shop this week at the just-opened Island Indoor Tennis centre on the Saanich Peninsula.

And Sunday night she gave her career as a teacher a real boost by crushing Vancouver Island's teenage whiz kid, Brenda Cameron, 6-1, 7-5 in the final of the first annual Island Indoor Classic tournament.

It was the first defeat in over a season in a solely Island tournament for Miss Cameron, who just couldn't control her power shots against her steadier opponent.

The men's singles final was an anti-climax when top-seeded Tony Simnett, after being hammered 6-1 in the first set, retired at 2-0 down in the second set and second-seeded Marty Taylor took the title.

Despite being sick throughout the weekend tourney, Simnett ousted highly-rated Ted Davies and Roger Skillings on his way to the final and Taylor didn't drop a set while disposing of Neil Coutts and Tim Cummings.

Derby Choice Wins

Foolish Pleasure made the Kentucky Derby oddsmakers look good Saturday by scoring an impressive victory in the $131,600 Flamingo Stakes at Miami's Hialeah racetrack.

The Flamingo, a warmup for the May classic for three-year-olds at Louisville, was strictly no contest as Foolish Pleasure, with Jacinto Vasquez up, finished the 1½-mile test 1¾ lengths ahead of Prince Thou Art.

Tide Still Has Chance

Victoria's Crimson Tide stayed in the race for the McKechnie Cup emblematic of inter-city rugby supremacy, by scoring a 9-6 victory over Fraser Valley on Saturday.

Daryl Noulette scored the Tide's lone try while Graham Hunter kicked the conversion and added a penalty goal. Randy Main supplied all the Fraser Valley points with two penalty goals.

In the other cup match Saturday, University of British Columbia topped Vancouver, 13-10.

The Victoria reps can claim the cup if they beat Vancouver and Fraser Valley upsets UBC in final matches in April.

Jeff Young kicked two penalty goals to lead the Junior Tide to a 6-0 shutout over Fraser Valley in an under-21 exhibition tussle.

Meanwhile, Cowichan moved to within two points of idle leading James Bay Athletic Association by tripping UVic Vikings 25-10 in a first division Victoria Rugby Union match Sunday at UVic.

In the other first-division match, Oak Bay Wanderers won their first encounter in five starts this season by steamrolling Castaways 39-7 at Carnarvon Park.

Pat Simmons kicked three penalty goals and two conversions to pace Cowichan, which led 12-10 at half time.

Elsewhere, Britain's Joe Bugner retained his European heavyweight title in Bologna, Italy, Saturday by stopping Dante Cane of Italy in the fifty round of a scheduled 15-round bout; Bobby Chacon of Sylmar, Calif., knocked out Mexico's Jesus Estrada in the second round in Los Angeles to keep his World Boxing Council featherweight crown, and Panama's Roberto Duran decked Portland's Ray Lamkin in the 14th round in Panama City to retain his World Boxing Association lightweight championship.

Quarter-finals: Wendy Cuppage and Erin Cockayne fought off the strong challenge of Taylor and Coutts to take the men's doubles crown, went to Miss Cameron and Wendy Cuppage when Felicity Graham's partner Kathy Metcalfe was forced to default because of illness.

Final: Cockayne and Skilling defeated Taylor and Coutts 2-1.

"STOP WORRYING, DEWEY! By tomorrow morning it'll all be covered over with snow."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Two partners were arguing over having stopped in a game on a hand where a slam was in the cards. The player who had "quit" despite his partner's slam try, advanced the usual fallacious argument: "Well, it was the rubber game and I thought we might as well take our sure profit. A bird in the hand, you know, is worth two in the bush."

His partner (South) looked sorrowfully at the score pad, which showed him to be a heavy loser. "Not," he said, "when you need two birds." South gave the contract an excellent play to bring home 12 tricks.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

SOUTH

♣ J 9 8 5 2

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ 2 ♦
3 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
5 ♦ Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♦.

South's four-club cue bid was, of course, a slam try;

had he been interested in merely a game, he would have bid four spades instead. North, feeling that he had bid his hand to the hilt, chose not to cut his diamond ace, and "signed off" at four spades. South, appreciating that North had passed originally, decided to settle for a game.

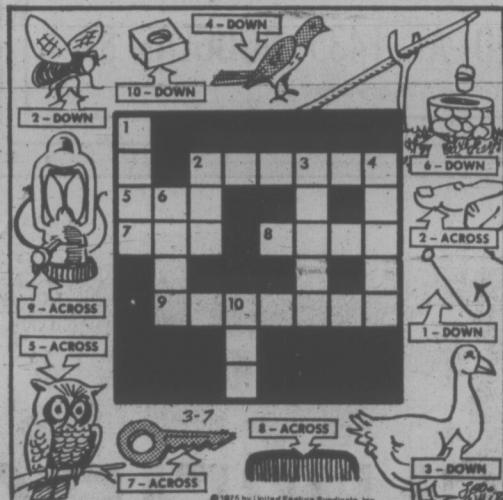

After winning the opening trump lead with his eight, South cashed the king of trumps. Next came a diamond to dummy's ace, after which a diamond was ruffed; this was followed by the ace and king of clubs. A third club lead was then ruffed in dummy, and the board's remaining diamond was next ruffed in the closed hand. Diamonds had just been eliminated from both the North and South hands.

South's last club was then led, upon which West played his last club, the queen. Declarer did not make the mistake of ruffing this trick in dummy. Instead, he discarded the board's three of hearts.

West was now end-played. If he returned a diamond, dummy's next-to-last heart would be discarded as South ruffed this trick. South's ace of hearts and dummy's two remaining trumps would now take the last three tricks. And if, instead, West played back a heart, South's queen would become his twelfth trick.

Had declarer ruffed his fourth club in dummy, he would have been forced to take the heart finesse. With the queen losing to West's king, he would now go down, since he would have to lose another heart trick.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Tues., Mar. 4
By SYDNEY OMARRE

ARIES (March 21-April 19):

Accent is on getting emotional antenna in action. Perceive what is being told to you in indirect ways and means. The obvious can be thrown aside. It is the subtle nuance, the meaning between the lines that take on added importance. Respond accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who cares for you may be too shy to discuss financial situation. Key is to get facts, figures and work out a creative budget. Shake off tendency to be fixed, stubborn and fearful. You will be receiving a tax credit — and you can afford to make loved one happy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cycle is high and unusual. You make great impression, right moves — but there is element of deception present. Envious persons are attempting to booby trap your efforts. Know it and protect yourself in clinches.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on legalities, partnerships, special relationships. One in authority wants to review your position, capabilities. Don't be paranoid about responding to questions. Piscis individual figures prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Low-key approach is best, especially in dealing with family. Domestic adjustment is on agenda. Talk of decoration costs and luxury items tends to dominate. Avoid excess. Go slow. Maintain emotional balance. Taurus, Libra persons are involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lunar aspect encourages romance, creativity, special relations with young persons. Ready for involvement and necessary changes. Don't promise more than can be delivered. Slow down on extravagance. Affection is not measured by how much you spend.

VIRO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Real estate, property agreements, serious discussion with mate or partner — these are highlighted. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Security is spotlighted. Don't give up something for nothing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ideas need concrete underpinning — means structure could leave something to be desired. Do some testing, research. Have enough faith to be patient. If so, you win. Otherwise, you may be embarrassed. The choice is your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money position needs review. Cash flow may be stopped unless you get rid of false premise. You'll comprehend Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Get to heart of matters. Be sure those who make promises understand what they're saying, doing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cycle is high and unusual. You make great impression, right moves — but there is element of deception present. Envious persons are attempting to booby trap your efforts. Know it and protect yourself in clinches.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Mystery, glamor dominate. Closed-door sessions are on agenda. You can get behind the story, to hidden factors. Highlight versatility and humor. Refuse to be backed into corner. You have right to laugh at foibles — your own and those exhibited by others. Gemini is in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some friends, well-meaning as they might be, could upset apple cart through indiscretion. Know it and don't tell all you know — even to "best friends." Keep something in reserve. Leo, Taurus, Scorpio persons are in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis is on career, advancement, standing in community. You make solid impression on those in power, authority. Your style intrigues. You are asked to demonstrate, illustrate. You also are promoted. What a day this can be!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, rebellious, creative, often alone in a crowd, were on your own early, broke from tradition and created your own lifestyle. June could be your most important month of 1975. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play significant roles in your life. You are dynamic, stubborn, determined and courageous. But you don't always live up to the best in yourself. Who's perfect?

Banks for the Ladies? —The Day Has Arrived

I suppose I should have known what's happening to suburban banks from the moment a reader sent me that clipping from the Wall Street Journal.

"Bankers in the United States and Canada are really serious in their drive to glamorize their business," it went, "since they discovered that outside the metropolitan area women do 85 per cent of the family banking. It has dawned on the banking fraternity that women are likely to patronize the bank that caters to them."

What little banking I do, you see, is conducted in an ancient mausoleum fronted by doric pillars in the downtown area, still substantially a man's world. It wasn't until chance took me to a suburban bank in one of the new shopping malls that I realized what changes have been made to answer the whims of the dominant female client.

What put me off first were the chintz curtains on the windows. That's funny, I thought, I must have the wrong address. But, no, there was the sign: Your Friendly Bank, Big Springtime Bargains.

I took my place in a queue that, I hoped, would lead to the teller's wicket. It was composed entirely of women. One, in front of me, was saying to her neighbor: "Have you met the new man in Loans, my dear? The dead-image of Burl Reynolds. And so sympathetic, too. He not only gives you money for your operation, he listens to all the details, too. We had a lovely hour over tea just last week."

"I must meet him," the second woman said. "Are you casting the old man's cheque?"

"Why not?" said the first woman. "I mean, Why Not?"

There was a burst of applause and giggles somewhere up ahead.

"Oh, darn," the woman in front of me said. "There goes today's door prize."

"Well," the other woman said, "we can still win the giant jackpot for the mystery cheque number, anyway."

... around me was enough to show that this was like no bank I'd ever been in before. The floor was covered with wall-to-wall broadloom in deep purple. The walls had been done in soft pastels. The tellers' cages were hung with chintz matching the front windows. Potted geraniums flanked each wicket. Ivy grew attractively about the entrance to the main vault. A subtle fragrance of perfume filled the room. Later I discovered it to be Eau de Luere.

The staff, too, had clearly undergone a transformation. The old, solid, dour, dependable types had been replaced by almost theatrically handsome young men. Occasionally there was a blinding flash of light as one of them smiled at a woman depositor.

Bewildered, switching my role from client to reporter, I waded through the broadloom to the manager's office. Here, surely, I could expect one of those traditional bankers of the past. But no. At a bleached mahogany desk the size of a Steinway sat a cherubic, dimpled young man with deeply marcelled hair. Where the word "Service" had been spelled out, there was now a wall plaque that bore only the message, "Cherchez La Femme." On the desk itself stood a massive golden candelabra and a nameplate which spelled out the single word, Geraldo.

"Mr. Geraldo?" I faltered.

"Not master," the boy-man said in a rich, creamy baritone. "Just Geraldo. It adds a certain glamor y'know."

"You are the manager?"

"I'm thrilled to say I am," Geraldo replied.

I sat down weakly in a velvet-covered chair.

"What's happening here?"

"Heavens! Wait'll you see it, when we're finished," Geraldo said. "The baby-sitter's room isn't half done yet. The basement won't open for another week. We're putting in rose-tinted mirrors down there. Encourages a woman to take out a long-term loan when she looks lovely, y'know."

"But . . ."

"Oh, we've lots of plans for the future," Geraldo bubbled on. "What do you think of mink-covered bank-books? Cut? Or a manicure while you await your loan? Oh, I shouldn't say 'loan.' We're calling it easy-credit money from now on. They like it that way. Or perhaps you've heard that we've asked the mint to print banknotes in a variety of colors to fit any wardrobe?"

A thought suddenly occurred to me as I looked out upon the customers.

"A thought suddenly occurs to me as I look out upon your customers," I said. "If we've reached a time when 85 per cent of bank clients are women, is the day far off when 85 per cent of bank bandits will be women?"

"We've thought of that, too," said Geraldo, dimpling. "You see, there's a foot-pedal in every teller's cage that needs only to be pressed to release the mice."

SAFECRACKERS FAIL TWICE

Safecrackers struck twice in one day Sunday at Nicholson Murdie Machines Ltd., 327 Harbour, but manager E. C. Brown said this morning they apparently took nothing.

Brown said he went to the shop Sunday about 11 a.m. and noticed office supplies had been disturbed and his office door opened.

Police were called and it was discovered that someone had tried to open the office vault, he said. After the office was searched Brown left the premises about 12:30 p.m.

From the amount of damage done to the vault, including a hole cut in its roof, thieves must have been at work all afternoon, Brown said.

At 6 p.m. the janitor phoned Brown at home to tell him the vault had been broken into.

"I said, 'don't worry,' we already know about it," he said.

He didn't bother returning to the shop, so didn't realize until this morning that thieves had gone to work on the safe between the time he had left and the janitor discovered the safe.

Not a single local authority in the Greater Victoria area has responded to a letter on bicycle safety from the Citizens Association to Save the Environment, C.A.S.E. president Derrick Mallard said today.

And meanwhile Mallard himself has had a forceful reminder — not that he needed one — on the need for special bicycle lanes. He was knocked off his bike by a vehicle Friday night, collided with a tree and received bruised ribs and mild concussion.

He said the organization first approached the provincial government to suggest a policy of providing special lanes, quoting the government's own statistics on death and injury to cyclists.

Those figures show that 40 per cent of vehicle mileage clocked up by the average American family is incurred by journeys of only two miles or less.

With the apparent lack of municipal interest in such concerns, how will C.A.S.E. continue pressing its case?

"We will just have to talk to individual aldermen and regional directors, and twist their arms to get them to reply," Mallard replied.

"What the hell else can we do, except perhaps put up picket lines of cyclists all over the place."

Mallard said the approach to municipalities was not intended to seek overnight provision of bicycle lanes, but to suggest consideration of the proposal with basic cost analysis "and at least some moral support for the idea."

Robert Peden, 28, of 676 Grenville, said:

"Regional government is unable to solve these problems."

But Harley Robertson, 52, of 463 Fraser, said some problems are best solved regionally.

"You can't very well hargan without talking."

Candidate Sherri Robinson, 32, of 729 Lampson, said issues as the CUPE problem are not relevant to the election.

Four more candidates filed nomination papers today for Esquimalt's March 22 by-election, bringing the number of candidates to eight.

Now today was the nomination deadline.

New candidates are Albert

Bowbyes, a storekeeper, of 1052 Craigflower; Maurice Dubuc, an electronics technician, of 1023 Colville; Stanley Loepky, chartered accountant, of 883 Roland Ave., and James Daily, of 313 Plaskett, a retired fireman, and husband of Education Minister Eileen Daily.

Of the candidates who filed earlier, two say the CUPE labor dispute would be solved if Esquimalt quit the regional bargaining team.

"Our guys in Local 333 said they'd take 15.76 per cent," said Lillian Dixon, 43, of 938 Wollaston.

Total Commitment

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the wife who had a fit when she caught her husband using her toothbrush.

At the time we both thought that was about the dumbest question we'd ever heard, but we thought for a few minutes and both said: "Yes."

The minister smiled and said: "Using someone else's toothbrush is positive proof of total commitment. I'll perform the ceremony." And he did.

We've laughed about it since then, but now we realize how wise he was. — Happy.

DEAR HAPPY: Thanks for brushing me up on what constitutes "total" commitment.

Fish Fillets Among Most Popular Items

By MARY MOORE

I think the meat manager in my supermarket must groan every time I enter the store for he knows he will be plagued with questions:

My latest trip I wanted to know what kind of fish was selling well. He told me fish fillets, ocean perch, haddock and cod were most popular.

Todays recipe calls for one pound of fish fillets and will serve three or four.

LEMON BAKED FISH FILLETS

1 lb. fresh or frozen fish fillets

1/4 c. water

1/4 c. milk

1/2 tsp. salt

1/2 c. yellow corn meal or very fine cracker crumbs

1/2 tsp. pepper

1/2 tsp. paprika

1 lemon, grated rind and juice

2 tbsp., melted butter or margarine

If fish fillets are frozen thaw them.

Cut fillets into serving-sized pieces. In small bowl combine water, milk and salt and stir until salt is dissolved. In small bowl combine corn meal or cracker crumbs, pepper, paprika and grated lemon rind, spread this mixture out on a piece of wax paper.

Dip pieces of fish in water-milk mixture, let drip then coat with corn meal or cracker crumb mixture. Place in single layer on well greased shallow pan.

In small cup combine the melted butter and juice squeezed from the lemon. Brush deftly over surface of fish fillets. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 20 minutes.

We served ours with my Baked Root Vegetable Medley (which had been put in the oven 1 hour in advance of the fish) and Spinach Souffle.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton. On enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10c for each specified recipe.

BY MICHAEL LAMM
DEAR MIKE:

My 1970 Maverick has developed a shimmy when I hit a certain type of bump. It doesn't happen often, but when it does, the only way to stop it is to slow down to about 30 mph and give several hard yanks on the wheel.

One problem with yanking the steering wheel, though, is that it's say the two are related.

It might be something as simple as loose the rods or complicated as worn-out ball joints with lots of possibilities in between. You ought to get your Maverick to a good front-end shop right quick, because your situation sounds dangerous, and without attention it'll only get worse.

DEAR MIKE:

My '71 VW Bug starts all right, but after the engine lights the starter lets out a grunt. It goes sort of "rau-rar-rar-oogaah." It's the "oogaah" I'm worried about. I've listened to plenty of other VW starters since mine started oogaahing, and none of them do it. What makes mine so special, do you think, and is it damaging anything?— Oogah

DEAR OO:

Sounds like your starter bearings are beginning to go. If I were you, I'd live with the oogaah until the starter gets weak (it might go on like this for years). Once the starter shows signs of weakness by not spinning the engine properly, that's the time to install a new or rebuilt one.

The Swiss Cheese Mice live, of course, in a wedge of Swiss cheese. Maybe that's why they have such chubby tummies. If you want to show gender, you can add a bow to the top of their heads.

1. The mice and zip-up cheese are made of felt, which doesn't require hemming.

2. Mice patterns are placed on a boxed network called a grid. This grid is 1 square equals 1/2 inch. Cheese is placed on a grid 1 square equals 1 1/2 inches. If you don't know how to enlarge patterns on a grid, send your request along with a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to The Leisure Craftsman in care of this newspaper.

3. Draw the grid and patterns on brown wrapping paper to make your patterns. The mouse's pink inner ears and tummy and his blue eyes are also on the grid.

4. Cut two body and tail shapes and four arm shapes for each mouse from brown or grey felt.

5. Sew on applique features, to both sides of Mouse No. 1 (side view) or to the front of Mouse No. 2 (front view).

6. Sew two arm and tail shapes together, 1/4 inch in from the edge. Leave the straight side edge unsewed on each shape. Lightly stuff and sew the open seam closed.

7. To sew the front view mouse, stitch a side view mouse, stitch a built-in comfort!

8. To sew the front view mouse, sew as above, tucking the arms into the body shape as you sew.

9. Cut two cheese shapes from yellow felt. Also cut two triangle shapes (for top wedge of cheese shape) from orange felt. Cut several circles from orange felt.

10. Sew the triangle shape to top of cheese shape and scatter the circles about the cheese.

11. Sew both top edges of the triangle on the cheese to a 12-inch zipper.

12. Sew the remaining sides of the cheese shapes together, 1/4 inch in from the edges.

13. The mouse family can be sewed in fabric with felt appliques. Sew, right sides facing in, then turn inside out.

14. The mice sleep at night and are zipped up in the cheese house.

sprained ankles among those who twist off platform heels, the cure lies in removing the cause, however it may offend the fashion-conscious sensibilities of the wearer.

Bootleg phlebitis seems to result from irritation and constriction by the upper border of poorly fitting dress boots. The bandlike compression abrades the superficial leg veins, especially if they tend to be varicose, and the result is the redness, swelling and pain of an inflamed vein, which often can be felt as a tender cord under the skin of the leg.

Gov't Pipeline 'Conspiracy'?

YELOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Canadian Arctic Resources Committee, a public interest group with special concern for the north, accused the federal government today of holding back vital information dealing with the proposed natural gas pipeline through the Mackenzie Delta.

"This apparent conspiracy in silence rekindles the suspicion in the minds of many that the decision to proceed with the pipeline has already been made and that the government is not interested in co-operating with a full public inquiry," said committee lawyer Russell Anthony of Vancouver.

The opening of the northern hearings by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of the supreme court of B.C. brought a full house in a Yellowknife Hotel ballroom, largest meeting hall in this territorial capital.

All of the participants in the hearings are to make opening statements outlining their stand on the $7-billion project to bring both Mackenzie Delta and Alaska natural gas to southern markets.

Anthony, making the case for the resource committee, said that the federal government, outside of the applicant Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd., was the largest source of information about the proposed pipeline.

Anthony told the hearing that the list was submitted only in late January and only after the resources committee threatened legal action compelling the government to do so.

The Vancouver lawyer said that not only was the list incomplete, but that the government so far had not compiled with requests for the documents listed.

"The government itself has been evasive and non-cooperative."

Under rulings made last year by Justice Berger, documents requested by parties in the inquiry and not presented to his commission can be ordered to be produced if the judge believes it is in the public interest.

Anthony said the committee is not saying now whether the pipeline project, the largest in Canadian history, should go ahead.

He said the committee would try to demonstrate during the hearing that the Arctic gas consortium "is in fact experimenting on the north."

"It is using a host of untried technology with undefined environmental consequences."

Fish Talks Postponed

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks between the U.S. and Canada on a west coast salmon treaty have been postponed, Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc said.

The talks, originally scheduled to begin Tuesday have been postponed by mutual consent and tentatively reset for late May.

"The delegations wanted more time to hammer out their position," the minister said.

Canadian fishermen have been complaining that Canada is not getting its fair share in its agreement with the United States.

Stevie Wonder Sweeps Grammy Awards... Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Blind soul singer Stevie Wonder has captured the best male vocalist and three other Grammy Awards in the 17th annual presentation by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Olivia Newton-John was best female pop vocalist, winning the big one, Record of the Year, for her I Honestly Love You.

The Grammy Awards are to the recording industry what the Oscars are to the movies.

Wonder, winner of five awards last year, received a standing ovation when he won the prize for best album of the year for his fabulous "Fulfillingness' First Finale. He was both producer and artist.

He went on to win best rhythm-'n'-blues male vocal performance for Boogie on Reggae Woman and best rhythm-'n'-blues song for Living in the City.

Miss Newton-John, won a Grammy last year as best female country vocalist.

Hamisch won the best pop instrumental performance Grammy for playing Scott Joplin's The Entertainer on the piano. He also won the best original movie score Grammy for The Way We Were. Hamisch lisch won three Oscars last year.

Aretha Franklin, who has won every best female rhythm-'n'-blues vocal award since that category was begun in 1968, won again for Ain't Nothing Like the Real Thing.

Awards for the best male and female country performers went to blind Ronnie Milsap for his Please Don't Tell Me How the Story Ends and Canadian Anne Murray for her Love Song.

The Pointer Sisters won the best country group prize for Fairytale.

Chet Atkins and Merle Travis won best instrumental with The Atkins-Travis Travelling Show and best country song was judged to be A Very Special Love Song.

Estee Lauder brings you a "24-hour Second Skin"—
fresh from the Swiss Alps

In her travels around the world Estee Lauder used to wonder why Swiss women looked so radiant regardless of age. She describes it as a wholesome, exuberantly healthy look with the softness of beautifully cared for skin. Being Estee Lauder, she did more than marvel at her discovery. She decided to develop a unique milky white lotion that would create a beauty environment in which complexions everywhere could thrive. The result?

Swiss Performing Extract. For all types of skin. Wear it like a second skin — 24 hours a day. Even if you are parched and dry it will give your skin a rich, polished look. Benefits increase with use, but best of all you will see as well as feel improvement. Your skin will look softer and firmer. At Eaton's, 1 1/4 oz. 16.50.

Dream Holiday Ends, Heidi Dies

BELLEVILLE, Ill. — "She got to see her dream didn't she?" asked Heidi Biggs' mother. "She got to see Hawaii."

Fourteen-year-old Heidi died of cancer Sunday, less than an hour after she was carried on a stretcher from a plane returning her home from Honolulu.

The trip had been her secret wish — the dream of a dying girl from a welfare family. Her mother, Mrs. Luelle Biggs, said that at the end Heidi asked one thing more:

She wanted to say goodbye to her younger brother and sister. But she died as the ambulance rushed her to them.

"We wanted to take her straight to the hospital," Mrs. Biggs said in an interview. "But she insisted on going home. She knew it was her time."

Heidi (right) learned last summer she was dying and doctors said she had less than a year to live. Deeply religious and a member of the Apostolic Church of God, a fundamentalist church, she put her trust in God.

Her mother said that the girl's faith sustained her through the chemical therapy that disfigured her and through the pain that never left.

An Associated Press story about her final Christmas touched Russell Penny, a Canadian businessman in Sudbury, Ont. He flew to Belleville to meet Heidi.

She told him what she had told no one else: She had seen a television travelogue about Hawaii and it was a place she secretly dreamed of seeing.

Penny helped organize a trust fund for the trip and people from all over the United States contributed.

Mrs. Biggs said Heidi had 2½ days in the sun before she suffered a collapsed lung, was confined to bed and fell into delirium.

"She told me, 'Mama, I hurt so bad. I hurt so bad-I wish I was dead.' I got her to recite the 23rd Psalm with me. She couldn't talk. She said the words in her head. She nodded when she finished a line."

His Grisly Nightmare ORDERED Came True

MIAMI BEACH — A Miami Beach policeman dreamed Sunday of being shot and wounded by a "suspect" he would pull over to the side of the road. A few hours later, the dream came true.

Officer Richard Trado, 28, told a friend about the dream shortly before he went on duty Sunday.

Trado was shot about an hour later when he stopped a pickup truck fitting the description of one used in the robbery of a Miami nightclub owner.

He is in satisfactory condition in hospital.

DEATH PENALTY ORDERED

WINNIPEG — George Joseph Peloquin, a former Vancouver newspaperman, has become the first person to receive the mandatory death sentence for murdering a prison employee since criminal code amendments in 1972 provided for a mandatory death sentence for the offence.

Asked by Mr. Justice J. R. Solomon of Manitoba court of queen's bench if he had anything to say at the time of sentencing, Peloquin, 33, answered, "no, I do not."

Peloquin was sentenced to hang at Headingley prison Sept. 10 for the murder last July 22 of Stanley Green, 52, a carpentry instructor at Stony Mountain, where Peloquin had been serving a term for armed robbery.

The former wife of the convicted man testified that Peloquin's behaviour had undergone dramatic alterations after he began to take drugs in the late 1960's.

She said he was transformed into a "passive, nervous" individual from being a "gentle" and "kind" man who spent as much time as he could with his children and who was "concerned about his job."

He had been under the delusion that she and her mother were using him as a focal point for witchcraft, she added.

Terrorists Seeking Asylum

★ SPORTS

It was a disastrous weekend for Victoria teams going after basketball championships. All three came up empty-handed.

Victoria Scorpions, who held a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five B.C. Senior "A" men's final two weeks ago, wound up losing the series to Vancouver Capilano when they were beaten 87-79 Sunday at UVic's McKinnon Building. Page 10.

University of Victoria Vikings, first-place finishers in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball standings, were eliminated in two straight games by UBC Thunderbirds in the playoff final at the McKinnon gym. Page 10.

And in Vancouver, Saanich Westerners bowed to Vancouver Buzz-Bombs in the third and deciding game of the B.C. Senior "A" women's championship Sunday at the McPherson Gym. Page 10.

Oak Bay Boys remained unbeaten in league and playoff games and captured their third straight Lower Island high school boys' basketball championship. Snow, PSAC Hit Halifax Airport

The Canadian Press
 Air Canada cancelled arrivals and departures during a heavy snowstorm at Halifax International Airport late Sunday because of a strike by runway maintenance workers, members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC).

A supervisor and one snowplow kept one runway at the airport open Sunday while bargaining between the federal government and the 19,600-member PSAC remained stalled.

KINNAIRD QUIT

A Vancouver trade unionist who was appointed provincial associate deputy minister of labor by the New Democratic Party in August, 1973, has resigned.

Jim Kinnaird, formerly president of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades' Council and vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, submitted his resignation to Labor Minister Bill King last Thursday, the Times learned today.

He said he handed in his resignation because "I am

RECORD TAG DAY

Saanich police issued a record 145 tickets on the weekend to drivers who missed the Feb. 28 deadline for 1975 licence plate decals.

At $25 a ticket, the defaults will add $3,625 to municipal coffers.

Elsewhere in the capital region things were normal.

In Esquimalt four or five tickets were issued while an Oak Bay police spokesman said the municipality had "pretty good observance". A few warnings were issued.

Sidney police reported 12 tickets issued, an average year.

FREIGHTERS WAITING, to unload cargoes are anchored off Royal Roads awaiting settlement of a strike by 4,000 B.C. longshoremen now crippling

CUPE Pay Proposal

'Needs Perspective'

Civic workers' demands for higher wages have been grossly exaggerated by municipal employers, spokesmen for Canadian Union of Public Employees said today as an area-wide dispute entered its sixth week.

Levi said the funds listed in estimates of revenue and expenditures, tabled in the house, were used to finance Woodlands School in New Westminster, and Tranquille in Kamloops.

The facilities were transferred from the Department of Health in June last year and allowed the province to obtain cost-sharing from the federal government under the terms of the Canada Assistance Plan, Levi said.

Kickback from the federal government under terms of the Canada Assistance Plan will be $7 million.

Transfer to human resources also allows a community-based service and a rehabilitative focus for the 1,100 people in the institutions.

Regional district chairman Jim Campbell said the request was unrealistic and not acceptable and instructed negotiator E. E. Pearman to seek a truer area of settlement when mediation talks resume Tuesday.

"He's inflated the union's proposal to use for political purposes," replied CUPE representative Tom Smith at a meeting with reporters this morning.

The 46 per cent composite wage increase referred to by Campbell "needs perspective," he said, suggesting the real figure would be closer to 31 per cent.

But most of the categories proposed by CUPE would rise by 18.76 per cent, although some would be as high as 46 per cent, said Jim Walker, chairman of the CUPE area bargaining committee and president of Local 50 city of Victoria outside workers, whose strike started the series to lockouts in six municipal jurisdictions.

Campbell had made "the most gross use of percentages I've ever seen," Walker declared.

He also denied that the union had offered to settle for up-island CUPE gains, referring to Port Alberni and Nanaimo contracts which employers said was suggested as a basis for concluding negotiations.

"CUPE offered to return to work if employers agreed to parity with rates paid school and municipal workers in Vancouver," Walker said.

"Their answer was a flat 'no.' It took them two minutes."

CUPE then submitted a nine-point proposal in which wages were based on rates in the major private and public industries in this area, to provide outside workers with a base of $6 an hour and inside staff $4.25 an hour. This was the basis for employers' calculation of a 46 per cent overall increase in wage costs.

Smith said the 46 per cent included 12 per cent tacked on by employers for inflation projected for 1975 and about 3 per cent for fringe benefits.

He called CUPE requests "fair and equitable."

Smith said if the union accepted the Nanaimo agreement of 30.3 per cent, it would still lag behind.

"Our position is right at the bottom of the barrel," Smith said. "We're not trying to lead anybody, we're just trying to catch up."

He agreed the wage cost to this area would have to rise by a "fairly sizeable" amount, but it was "completely irresponsible" of refer to a 46 per cent jump.

Gilmour asked for the union to work out percentage increases for Victoria area categories based on up-island settlements and these were delivered to him Saturday.

Smith said the mediator may explore that area further in Tuesday's talks, but the CUPE spokesman was "not overly optimistic" of success.

City of Victoria Locals 50 and 388 (inside staff) prepared figures to refute the calculations offered last week by Campbell. The union said total demands would raise the salary bill by $1.87 million.

60 Schools Boost Guard, Dog Patrols

All 60 schools in the Greater Victoria district are being patrolled on an increased basis by Island Security guards and dogs during the school day.

A broken window was found in the room.

"There is no question the fire was deliberately set off," said school principal Wilfred Durrant. "I rather doubt it was done by anyone from the school."

Damage was estimated at $50.

School board spokesman Bill Stavdal confirmed the patrol company had increased its checks.

"The purpose is to ensure security of our plant (schools), worth $100 million."

School custodians have been off the job for one week due to a labor dispute.

Guards discovered a fire in the furnace room of Craighouse elementary Sunday night which is being investigated "with suspicion."

Campbell had made "the most gross use of percentages I've ever seen," Walker declared.

He also denied that the union had offered to settle for up-island CUPE gains, referring to Port Alberni and Nanaimo contracts which employers said was suggested as a basis for concluding negotiations.

"CUPE offered to return to work if employers agreed to parity with rates paid school and municipal workers in Vancouver," Walker said.

High Oil Prices OPEC Meet Aim

Times News Services

The 13 oil-producing nations are considering summit approval of two plans to keep oil prices high, oil sources said today. One would be a special fund and the other would be an inflation index.

The report came as leaders of the 13 nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries began arriving in Algiers for the cartel's first summit meeting, scheduled to open in this Mediterranean capital Tuesday.

Meanwhile, one Middle East oil producer, Abu Dhabi, has reached an arrangement with Western oil companies to lower prices and increase production in the Persian Gulf emirate.

The country's oil minister, Manne Saeed Al Otaiba, said Saturday the price reduction is about 55 cents a barrel on Abu Dhabi's best crude oil, which previously sold for $11.20 a barrel.

It was not immediately known what extent the reduced retail prices in the West.

However small, the reduction was the first official price cutback in a country belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries since OPEC raised the price of oil in late 1973.

But other OPEC delegations, at the summit meeting, are agreeing on two ideas:

—A fund to funnel money to any OPEC nation that finds itself short of money and might be tempted to increase sales by cutting prices, as Abu Dhabi did, and the fund's backers want to keep it from happening again.

—An "indeviation" link, which would tie the price of oil to the price of several other, perhaps 20 or 30, major commodities in world trade. As the prices of these other items went up, so would the price of oil. The idea is to keep oil incomes from being eroded by inflation.

Both plans were said to be vague and without detail. The inflation link might not take effect for another year or two, the sources said.

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and at least four other chiefs of state were expected to stay away from the meeting.

The summit is convening as business slows down around the world at such a rapid rate that it has forced the closing of 20 per cent of the non-socialist world's producing oil fields.

The growing oil surplus is showing up in every nation that produces oil for export. The worldwide surplus is now estimated to be between 8 and 10 million barrels a day, with most oilmen leaning toward the higher figure.

"We're also seeing a surplus refinery capacity around the world that's between 20 and 30 per cent and the same with tanker capacity," said William Slick, senior vice president of Exxon Corp. "There is a lot of idle capacity in the oil market."

longshore jobs, as the union says. He added that the union had rejected a management proposal which suggested that the clause be removed for a 12-month trial period while an independent expert studied the situation.

Cregan said the clause must be removed if Vancouver is to regain some of the container traffic now diverted to Seattle where the longshore contract does not contain the clause.

He said Vancouver already has a poor image as a port throughout the world because of frequent labor troubles, and said longshoremen's strike isn't helping that image.

Don Garcia, spokesman for the union, said Saturday that the longshoremen are seeking a one-year contract with a $1.50-an-hour increase over the present base rate of $6.08.

However, Cregan said the union wants a $1.75 an hour in an 18-month contract and said the employers have offered $1.75 in 24 months.

120 City Longshoremen Off Job

About 120 Victoria-based longshoremen are among 4,000 B.C. members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union who struck at midnight Saturday to bring deepsea cargo handling to a stop in 11 ports.

Dock operations at Ogden Point, Vancouver, Cowichan Bay, New Westminster, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo and Port Alberni were halted Sunday, as was traffic in Chemainus and the three other ports it serves — Haro, Crofton and Ladysmith.

Negotiations between the union and the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association broke down Saturday over wages and jurisdiction of container cargo.

The previous 2½-year contract expired last Dec. 31. Negotiations have been underway since October and both sides have waived conciliation in order to bargain directly.

It is not known how many vessels will be affected by the walkout, but 42 ships were

Banks for the Ladies? —The Day Has Arrived

I suppose I should have known what's happening to suburban banks from the moment a reader sent me that clipping from the Wall Street Journal.

"Bankers in the United States and Canada are really serious in their drive to glamorize their business," it went, "since they discovered that outside the metropolitan area women do 85 per cent of the family banking. It has dawned on the banking fraternity that women are likely to patronize the bank that caters to them."

What little banking I do you see, is conducted in an ancient mausoleum fringed by doric pillars in the downtown area, still substantially a man's world. It wasn't until chance took me to a suburban bank in one of the new shopping malls that I realized what changes have been made to answer the whims of the dominant female client.

What put me off first were the chintz curtains on the windows. That's funny, I thought, I must have the wrong address. But, no, there was the sign: Your Friendly Bank, Big Springtime Bargains.

I took my place in a queue that, I hoped, would lead to the teller's wicket. It was composed entirely of women. One, in front of me, was saying to her neighbor: "Have you met the new man in Loans, my dear? The dead image of Burt Reynolds. And so sympathetic, too. He not only gives you money for your operation, he listens to all the details, too."

We had a lovely hour over tea just last week."

"I must meet him," the second woman said. "Are you cashing the old man's cheque?"

"Why not?" said the first woman. "I mean, Why Not?"

There was a burst of applause and giggles somewhere up ahead.

"Oh, darn," the woman in front of me said. "There goes today's door prize."

"Well," the other woman said, "we can still win the giant jackpot for the mystery cheque number, anyway."

A glance around me was enough to show that this was like no bank I'd ever been in before. The floor was covered with wall-to-wall, broadloom in deep purple. The walls had been done in soft pastels. The tellers' cages were hung with chintz matching the front windows. Potted geraniums flanked each wicket. Ivy grew attractively about the entrance to the main vault. A subtle fragrance of perfume filled the room. Later I discovered it to be Eau de Lucre.

The staff, too, had clearly undergone a transformation. The old, solid, dour, dependable types had been replaced by almost theatrically handsome young men. Occasionally there was a blinding flash of light as one of them smiled at a woman depositor.

Bewildered, switching my role from client to reporter, I waded through the broadloom to the manager's office. Here, surely, I could expect one of those traditional bankers of the past. But no. At a bleached mahogany desk the size of a Steinway sat a cherubic, dimpled young man with deeply marcelled hair. Where the word "Service" had been spelled out, there was now a wall plaque that bore only the message, "Cherchez La Femme." On the desk itself stood a massive golden candelabra and a nameplate which spelled out the single word, Geraldo.

"Mr. Geraldo?" I faltered.

"Not master," the boy-man said in a rich, creamy baritone. "Just Geraldo. It adds a certain glamor y'know."

"You are the manager?"

"I'm thrilled to say I am," Geraldo replied.

I sat down weakly in a velvet-covered chair.

"What's happening here?"

"Heavens! Wait'll you see it when we're finished." Geraldo said. "The baby-sitter's room isn't half done yet. The bargain basement won't open for another week. We're putting in rose-tinted mirrors down there. Encourages a woman to take out a long-term loan when she looks lovely, y'know."

"But . . ."

"Oh, we've lots of plans for the future," Geraldo bubbled on. "What do you think of minx-covered bank-books? Cute? Or a mannequin while you await your loan? Oh, I shouldn't say 'loan.' We're calling it easy-credit money from now on. They like it that way. Or perhaps you've heard that we've asked the mint to print banknotes in a variety of colors to fit any wardrobe?"

A thought suddenly occurred to me as I looked out upon the customers.

"A thought suddenly occurs to me as I look out upon your customers," I said. "If we've reached a time when 85 per cent of bank clients are women, is the day far off when 85 per cent of bank handbags will be women?"

"We've thought of that, too," said Geraldo, dimpling. "You see, there's a foot-pedal in every teller's cage that needs only to be pressed to release the mice."

SAFECRACKERS FAIL TWICE

Safecrackers struck twice in one day Sunday at Nicholson Murdie Machines Ltd., 327 Harbour, but manager E. C. Brown said this morning they apparently took nothing.

Brown said he went to the shop Sunday about 11 a.m. and noticed office supplies had been disturbed and his office door opened.

Police were called and it was discovered that someone had tried to open the office vault, he said. After the office was searched Brown left the premises about 12:30 p.m.

At 6 p.m. the janitor phoned Brown at home to tell him the vault had been broken into.

"I said, 'don't worry, we already know about it,'" he said.

He didn't bother returning to the shop — so didn't realize until this morning that thieves had gone to work on the safe between the time he had left and the janitor discovered the safe.

From the amount of damage done to the vault, including a hole cut in its roof, thieves must have been at work all afternoon, Brown said.

Police were called and it was discovered that someone had tried to open the office vault, he said. After the office was searched Brown left the premises about 12:30 p.m.

It was a disastrous weekend for Victoria teams going after basketball championships. All three came up empty-handed.

Victoria Scorpions, who held a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five B.C. Senior "A" men's final two weeks ago, wound up losing the series, to Vancouver Capilano when they were beaten 87-79 Sunday at UVic's McKinney Building. Page 10.

University of Victoria Vikings, first-place finishers in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball standings, were eliminated in two straight games by UBC Thunderbirds in the playoff final at the McPherson gym. Page 10.

And in Vancouver, Saanich Westerners bowed to Vancouver Buzz Bombs in the third and deciding game of the B.C. Senior "A" women's championship Sunday. Page 10.

KINNAIRD QUILTS

A Vancouver trade unionist who was appointed provincial associate deputy minister of labour by the New Democratic Party in August, 1973, has resigned.

Jim Kinnaird, formerly president of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades' Council and vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, submitted his resignation to Labor Minister Bill King last Thursday, the Times learned today.

He said he handed in his resignation because "I am personally fed up with being a bureaucrat, but I am leaving on the best of terms with the minister and others working in the department."

Kinnaird said it was strictly a personal decision and did not result from conflict with the provincial labor department, although, he said, he was tired of holding the position.

Michael Lyons, a PSAC spokesman in Toronto, said the demand is the least the union will accept, bringing members' salaries to 90 per cent of that earned in similar private-sector jobs.

He also denied that the union had offered to settle for up-island CUPE gains, referring to Port Alberni and Nanaimo contracts which employers said was suggested as a basis for concluding negotiations.

CUPE offered to return to a personal decision and did not result from conflict with the provincial labor department, although, he said, he was tired of holding the position.

Their answer was a flat "no." It took them two minutes.

Saanich police issued a record 145 tickets on the weekend to drivers who missed the Feb. 28 deadline for 1975 licence plate decals.

Elsewhere in the capital region things were normal.

In Esquimalt four or five tickets were issued while an Oak Bay police spokesman said the municipality had "pretty good observance". A few warnings were issued.

Sidney police reported 12 tickets issued, an average year.

High Oil Prices OPEC Meet Aim

Times News Services

The 13 oil-producing nations are considering summit approval of two plans to keep oil prices high, oil sources said today. One would be a special fund and the other would be an inflation index.

The report came as leaders of the 13 nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries began arriving in Algiers for the cartel's first summit meeting, scheduled to open in this Mediterranean capital Tuesday.

Meanwhile, one Middle East oil producer, Abu Dhabi, has reached an arrangement with Western oil companies to lower prices and increase production in the Persian Gulf emirate.

The country's oil minister, Manna Saeed Al Otaiba, said Saturday the price reduction is about 55 cents a barrel on Abu Dhabi's best crude oil, which previously sold for $11.20 a barrel.

It was not immediately known to what extent the reduction would be reflected in decreased retail prices in the West.

However small, the reduction was the first official price cutback in a country belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries since OPEC raised the price of oil in late 1973.

But other OPEC delegations, at the summit meeting, are agreeing on two ideas:

—A fund to funnel money to any OPEC nation that finds itself short of money and might be tempted to increase sales by cutting prices, as Abu Dhabi did, and the fund's backers want to keep it from happening again.

—An "inflation" link, which would tie the price of oil to the price of several other, perhaps 20 or 30, major commodities in world trade. As the prices of these other items went up, so would the price of oil. The idea is to keep oil incomes from being eroded by inflation.

Both plans were said to be vague and without detail. The inflation link might not take effect for another year or two, the sources said.

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and at least four other chiefs of state were expected to stay away from the meeting.

The summit is convening as business slows down around the world at such a rapid rate that it has forced the closing of 20 per cent of the non-socialist world's producing oil fields.

The growing oil surplus is showing up in every nation that produces oil for export. The worldwide surplus is now estimated to be between 8 and 10 million barrels a day, with most oilmen leaning toward the higher figure.

"We're also seeing a surplus refinery capacity around the world that's between 20 and 30 per cent and the same with tanker capacity," said William Slick, senior vice-president of Exxon Corp. "There

L.A. Shaken

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A minor earthquake rammed through metropolitan Los Angeles today, jiggling residents awake and vibrating high-rise buildings in the civic centre area. No damage was reported.

Gilmour asked for the union to work out percentage increases for Victoria area categories based on up-island settlements and these were delivered to him Saturday.

Smith said the mediator may explore that area further in Tuesday's talks, but the CUPE spokesman was "not overly optimistic" of success.

City of Victoria Locals 50 and 388 (inside staff) prepared figures to refute the calculations offered last week by Campbell. The union said its demands would raise the salary bill by $1.87 per cent.

'Needs Perspective'

Civic workers' demands for higher wages have been grossly exaggerated by municipal employers, spokesmen for Canadian Union of Public Employees said today as an area-wide dispute entered its sixth week.

Both sides have now broken their earlier pact to remain silent on specific issues during new attempt by provincial mediator Clark Gilmour to achieve settlement between municipal and school employers and nearly 1,800 staff on strike or locked out since Jan. 27.

During talks involving Gilmour last week, the regional employers bargaining group said CUPE demands would raise wage costs in the area by 46 per cent in a one-year contract.

Regional district chairman Jim Campbell said the request was unrealistic and not acceptable and instructed negotiator E. E. Pearman to seek a truer area of settlement when mediation talks resume Tuesday.

He's inflated the union's proposal to use for political purposes," replied CUPE representative Tom Smith at a meeting with reporters this morning.

The 46 per cent composite wage increase referred to by Campbell "needs perspective," he said, suggesting the real figure would be closer to 31 per cent.

But most of the categories proposed by CUPE would rise by 18.76 per cent, although some would be as high as 46 per cent, said Jim Walker, chairman of the CUPE area bargaining committee and president of Local 50 city of Victoria outside workers, whose strike started the series to lockouts in six municipal jurisdictions.

Campbell had made "the most gross use of percentages I've ever seen," Walker declared.

He also denied that the union had offered to settle for up-island CUPE gains, referring to Port Alberni and Nanaimo contracts which employers said was suggested as a basis for concluding negotiations.

CUPE offered to return to a personal decision and did not result from conflict with the provincial labor department, although, he said, he was tired of holding the position.

Crofton and Ladysmith

Negotiations between the union and the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association broke down Saturday over wages and jurisdiction of container cargo handling to a stop in 11 ports.

Dock operations at Ogden Point, Vancouver, Cowichan Bay, New Westminster, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo and Port Alberni were halted Sunday, as was traffic in Chemainus and the three other ports it serves — Harmalongshoremen are among 4,000 B.C. members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union who struck at midnight Saturday over wages and jurisdiction of container cargo.

The previous 2½-year contract expired last Dec. 31. Negotiations have been under way since October and both sides have waived conciliation in order to bargain directly.

It is not known how many vessels will be affected by the walkout, but 42 ships were awaiting cargo in Vancouver Sunday and five were anchored in Royal Roads because anchorage in Vancouver's English Bay is full.

Alex Cregan, president of the employers' group, said Sunday that the real issue in the dispute is the container clause, which requires longshoremen to unpack containers taken off ships in Vancouver.

He said removal of the clause would not mean fewer longshore jobs, as the union says. He added that the union had rejected a management proposal which suggested that the clause be removed for a 12-month trial period while an independent expert studied the situation.

Cregan said the clause must be removed if Vancouver is to regain some of the container traffic now diverted to Seattle where the longshore contract does not contain the clause.

He said Vancouver already has a poor image as a port

MURDER CHARGE LAID

A 21-year-old Victoria man was scheduled to appear in provincial court today charged with the non-capital murder of 18-year-old Patricia Rose Nicholet whose body was found Saturday on the Vic West waterfront.

Meanwhile, one Middle East oil producer, Abu Dhabi, has reached an arrangement with Western oil companies to lower prices and increase production in the Persian Gulf emirate.

Police today said the man, whose name was withheld until the court appearance, was located by the detective office "without much difficulty."

Mrs. Nicholet, separated from her husband, was found on rocks fully-clothed near the high-tide mark at the foot of Barnard Street.

Cause of death has not yet been determined, but police said there was a gash on the back of Mrs. Nicholet's head and scratches on her neck.

The woman was discovered about 50 feet from the bottom of steps leading down to the water. A man walking his dog at about 10 a.m. spotted the body, which was clothed in an overcoat. Mrs. Nicholet was still wearing shoes and her handbag was hanging on her shoulder.

Her clothes were soaked from high tides which had covered the area where she was discovered, and then ebbed.

The dead woman had been living at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Johnson, and had been employed at a concession stand at the legislature buildings.

Gunman Shoots 5 At Hostel

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five persons were hospitalized — one in critical condition — after a man armed with a rifle and dressed in a military uniform went on a shooting spree in a youth hostel Sunday.

Police later arrested a suspect after an armed confrontation at a gun shop a mile from the hostel.

They credited gun shop owner Doug Hough with putting an end to what could have developed into a major gun battle between the suspect and police converging on the scene.

120 City Longshoremen Off Job

throughout the world because of frequent labor troubles, and said longshoremen's strike isn't helping that image.

Don Garcia, spokesman for the union, said Saturday that the longshoremen are seeking a one-year contract with a $1.50-an-hour increase over the present base rate of $6.08.

However, Cregan said the union wants a $1.75 an hour in an 18-month contract and said the employers have offered $1.75 in 24 months.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Two partners were arguing over having stopped in a game on a hand where a slam was in the cards. The player who had "quit" despite his partner's slam try, advanced the usual fallacious argument: "Well, it was the rubber game and I thought we might as well take our sure profit. A bird in the hand, you know, is worth two in the bush."

His partner (South) looked sorrowfully at the score pad, which showed him to be a heavy loser. "Not," he said, "when you need two birds." South gave the contract, an excellent play to bring home 12 tricks.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"How old is Aunt Katie?" asked Carol. "She looks much younger than you."

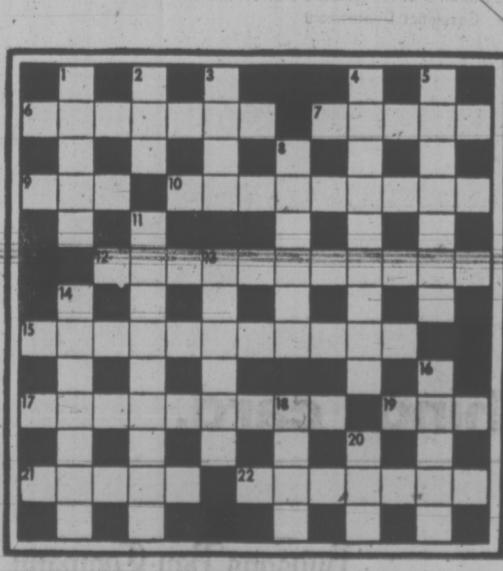

"She does, does she? Okay, then you can figure it out yourself," Ken chuckled. "If you multiply the two digits of her age together you get what her age was 11 years ago."
